Bill Aims to Level Tax Playing Field for Self-Employed

Coalition of Small Business Groups Hails House Bill for Self-Employed

Washington, D.C., March 16, 2006 – The Coalition Supporting Equity for Our Nation's Self-Employed, representing over 30 small business organizations, applauds the introduction of the Equity for Our Nation's Self-Employed Act of 2006, H.R. 4961, a bill that would eliminate an inequity in the tax code that requires 14 million self-employed individuals to pay an additional 15.3 percent in taxes on the cost of their health insurance premiums.

Introduced by Representatives Melissa Hart (R-PA) and Donald Manzullo (R-IL), the bill allows sole proprietors to deduct the cost of health insurance premiums as a normal business expense when calculating their federal self-employment tax. Currently, all business entities except sole proprietors deduct their health premiums as a business expense and forego FICA (Social Security and Medicare) taxes on these expenses. This leaves filers of Schedule C and Schedule E tax forms as the only business entities paying a 15.3 percent tax on these costs.

"This problem affects all self-employed," said Robert Hughes, president of the National Association for the Self-Employed. "The inequality can mean the difference between having and not having health insurance. These added costs are a key contributor to why the self-employed and micro-business owners are the majority of those without health insurance today."

Adding to the already skyrocketing cost of health premiums, this additional payment contributes to the number of working uninsured. According to the Census Bureau, 45 million Americans do not have health coverage, and 60 percent come from families where the head of household is self-employed or works for a small business. Additionally, because they buy insurance on the individual market, premiums for the self-employed are already approximately 18 percent higher than larger corporations are able to negotiate. The bill would end a significant disparity that has contributed to the nation's health-care crisis by abolishing strong cost penalties in health insurance imposed on the self-employed.

According to the Kaiser Family Foundation, sole proprietors pay $10,880 per year for health coverage of a family of four. Come tax season, since that expense is not deductible when calculating self-employment tax, they pay $1,664 more to the federal government in payroll tax on these premiums. No other business entity must pay this added cost.

“With women-owned businesses growing at twice the rate of all businesses in our country, it is important for them to have a level playing field in terms of taxation, so that they can put as many resources as possible into their business’s growth and development,” states Erin Fuller, executive director of the National Association of Women Business Owners.

"NSBA enthusiastically supports this bill and will make its passage a top priority for the association," NSBA President Todd McCracken said. "It is time, once and for all, for small businesses to be put on equal footing with large businesses when paying for health care."
